DEATH AND THE WORLD OF IMAGINATION: IBN AL-ARABI'S ESCHATOLOGY

Teachings about eschatology or the "return" (al-maw'ad) to God make up the third of the three principles of Sufism (Ibn Arabi, after Chirya Uray [al-saw'ad] and gaw'ad [al-maw'ad]). These Sufis who discuss eschatology cover a wide variety of topics, two of the most important being the "voluntary return" (al-rig' al-istisw'iyah) and the "compulsory return" (al-rig' al-istisw'iyah); the first deals with the path of attaining spiritual perfection in this life, the second with the return of physical death and bodily resurrection.¹ The great Ibn al-'Arabi (d. 1240) discusses both topics voluminously and sets the stage for all subsequent treatments by Sufis, philosophers, and theologians down to recent times. In the present article an attempt will be made to outline a few of his teachings on the compulsory return and suggest how they fit into his overall world view.

Revolution and Return

Sufi teachings are often looked upon as a departure from "orthodox" Islam, but in most cases this view stems upon a misapprehension of the term "orthodoxy" and an ignorance of the exact content of the teachings in question. More careful examination leads to support the views of Sufism and others as to "The Consistent Character of Mystical Experience", the specifically Sufi explanations of Islamic teachings are not made to subvert the dogma but to support it and to open the way to faith for those individuals who find the conventional explanations offered by the theologians and jurists intellectually or spiritually unconvincing. Ibn al-'Arabi's exposition of Islamic eschatology fits into this category. For those seeking such articles of faith as the two angels who question the soul in the grave, the blast on Sarghul's trumpet that awakens the dead, the Balance set up to weigh human deeds at the Resurrection, and the division of human beings into the subdivisions of paradise and hell, Ibn al-'Arabi maintains that anyone who attempts to turn these doctrines into metaphors or allegories

Ibn al-'Arabi's discussion reveals a great deal of the time and progress work which the late philosopher completed after extensive treatment of eschatology, of which he held, The Wisdom of the Prophet, in Islamic Mysticism, Princeton University Press, 1967.
